Paintball Guns UK Since paintball has become a popular entertainment activity there has been an increase in avid paintball players buying their own paintball equipment. The main part of any kit bag is the paintball gun, which can also be called a paintball marker (some people don't like to mention paintball signs like guns at all), this is the most basic element of any game of paintball. We have hundreds of paint guns for sale to suit all budgets and needs. Paint ball guns use either push fuel (or CO2 High pressure air (HPA) to power a shooting mechanism that pushes a ball out of the front of the paintball marker through a barrel. There are many brands and styles of paintball guns available. When buying your first paintball marker, you should stick to a recognized brand so you know you are buying a quality piece of the set that is going to be covered by warranty. onions. more information should you check out our blog on 'What is the best paintball gun for beginners?' Paintball Masks Paintball masks can also be called paint glasses, for obvious safety reasons you cannot play paintball without one. If you are just starting to take paintball up as a hobby, we would recommend a paintball mask as the first bit of kit you should buy, check out The First Piece Of Paintball Kit You Should Buy. All paintball masks come in a universal size with straps to adjust accordingly, although some offer more coverage, visibility and protection than others. Different brands and models of paintball masks have a different fit, so it's really a good idea to try some days before you buy. What suits a person may well not suit the next person and a poorly equipped gogger can cause even the most expensive models to steam up – look out for models with thermal lenses, these are two paned and are the least likely to steam up. If you're having problems with your paintball mask steaming up check out our How to Prevent Your Paintball Mask from Mist blog posts. For more help, check out our Paintball Mask Buying Guide. You can confidently buy a mask from BZ Paintball because we only have CE-approved stock models to ensure your safety. Paintball Hoppers Funnel Paintball is the 'tube' located at the top/side of your gun and stores paintballs and eats them into the marker, which can also be called a 'paintball loader'. The standard capacity for the paint hopper is about 200. At first you can get away with a cheap gravity feeding hopper, but if you tend to shoot fast or buy an electronic marker (which burns fast) then you'll need an electronic loader to be able to eat as fast as you can shoot. For more help check out our 'Paintball Hopper - what you need to know' blog post. Paintball Barrels Upgrade your paintball gun with our vast range of paintball barrels - perfect for improving your gun range and accuracy. For more insight check out our What you need to know about paintball blog post barrels. Paintball Gas Tank Paintball gas cylinders/bottles hold the push fuel that powers the firing mechanism on paintball markings. This can be either source - Co2 or High Pressure Air (HPA). Co2 was once the norm, but the air quickly became most variable due to its consistency compared to CO2. The choice of tanks you go for will largely depend on your local gas being able to recharge (no point buying an HPA tank if where you go out can only fill co2 for example). In addition, your gun choice may affect what gas is available to you as a lot of electronic markings in compatibility with Co2. You should know most tanks offered empty when buying as courier will not transport pressure tanks. Paintballs At BZ Paintball we have an extensive selection of paintballs available to buy, drop paintballs from brands like Pro-Star and HK Army. Interestingly though called 'Paintballs', they're not really filled with any paint! They contain a mixture of ingredients that are easy to clean once a player is hit. Glossy paint varies in quality and quality is determined by your main purpose. As a general guide, the more expensive the paint, the more brittle it will be, breaking easier. However, to use high-end paint, you will need a high-end paintball gun. We recommend trying a variety of brands and paintball layers until you find the perfect paint for your playing style. For more information on our paintball test class 'different layers of paintballs' blog post. Paintballs must be stored correctly until your next game, to perform properly. By properly maintaining your paintballs this will ensure they are ready to go whenever you want to play – to ensure you host your paintballs correctly check out our How to Store Your Paintballs blog post. Paintball Shop UK As well as our online store, we have the largest paint ball shop in the UK and you can find us at many paintball events across the UK every year! Founded in the UK in 1984, paintballing is probably played more by adults than children, although with an increase in events held in dedicated locations, it is a popular party pastime for children aged 8 and over. Using water-soluble paint balls, children's paint guns come in a variety of sizes of ammunition clips with larger ones that can fire multiple shots in a row. If a party does not take place, many children's paint guns provided with a target can be attached to a suitable tree or fence in a garden. Others are offered in a double package so friends or siblings can still have fun shooting safely at each other. While a paint ball can hurt if fired from very close distances, the use of gogg goggles and clothing is strongly recommended to keep minor injuries to a minimum. Rules in the game Different, although once a warrior is hit, they usually have to retire from the game until the next round. By buying child paint guns, parents are encouraging their children to get outside, get active and have a lot of fun. With air models or CO2 to choose from, paintballing has never been popular, and with so many different shades to choose from, it's never been so colorful either!
